

UK Nanoforum and Emerging Technologies 2009, 3 – 4 November 2009, London

The UK Nanoforum & EmTech 2009 conference and exhibition will bring over 100 senior international delegates from more than 20 countries together with the best of the UK's nanotechnology community. With a focus on trade, investment and collaborations, this will be a networking forum for industry, academia, technology purchasers and those seeking to develop joint ventures and future partnerships.

The breakout session themes for this years event are:

- Life Sciences & Healthcare
- Energy & Environment
- Materials & Devices

Poster Presentations will run alongside the main exhibition throughout the afternoon on Tuesday 03 November 2009. With over 300 UK and International experts in Nanotechnology expected to attend, this provides an excellent opportunity for scientists/academics to talk about their research and develop future contacts.

Abstract submission

You are invited to submit abstracts for poster presentations on current research which it is envisaged will have future impact on any of the themes above. We will also accept presentations on research which will lead to other novel applications of Nanotechnology. We particularly encourage presentations on work that is in progress, as well as completed work. New for this year, we are also excepting presentations on 'Emerging Technologies' in the areas of photonics, plastic electronics and ultra precision surfaces relating to the themes above.

SUBMIT AN ABSTRACT:

If you are interested in the opportunity to present your poster at this years event then please submit abstracts including title, authors (indicating attending author) and author affiliations with an abstract body of 300 words maximum to Toby Gill at enquiries@nanoktn.com by the 31st July 2009.

(N.B. Those that have been accepted will be notified by the 15th August and Posters will be expected by September 30th . One free delegate pass will be provided for each university displaying a poster. If selected, you will need to be available to man your poster for the duration of the exhibition on the afternoon of the 03 November. You are also welcome to attend the second day on 04 November but this is at your discretion)
